Dr. Vonda Jump Norman is an assistant professor in the Social Work department at Utah State University as well as the director of the Trauma Resiliency Project at The Family Place, a local nonprofit in Logan, Utah. Dr. Jump Norman is also co-chair of the Resilience through Caring Connections Collaborative in Box Elder, Cache, and Rich counties, is a ZERO TO THREE Fellow, and has worked extensively with the military to support families as they navigate through trauma, grief, and loss. She serves as a steering committee member for the Utah Coalition for Protecting Childhood as well as on the Board of Directors for the Utah Association for Infant Mental Health. She has been conducting research on parent-child relationships and ways to promote optimal development of children for over 20 years, and is interested in the intersection of physical and mental health.