Jason Lang, Ph.D., is Vice President of Mental Health Initiatives at the Child Health and Development Institute (CHDI), where he oversees CHDI's work in the areas of trauma informed care, evidence-based practices, and school and community programs. His work encompasses behavioral health, child welfare, juvenile justice, law enforcement, education, pediatric primary care, and family advocacy organizations to improve children's behavioral health systems, policies, and practices.

Dr. Lang is a licensed clinical psychologist who also holds appointments as an Assistant Clinical Professor in Psychiatry at UCONN Health and at the Yale Child Study Center, and he has published and presented nationally about childhood trauma and implementation of evidence-based treatments.