Dr. Marva Lewis earned a Ph.D. in Sociocultural Psychology and is an Associate Professor at Tulane University School of Social Work with a clinical appointment in the Institute of Infant & Early Childhood Mental Health. Her research studies emotional attunement during African American mother-daughter hair combing interaction. The application of findings from this research were used to develop culturally valid, community-based interventions to strengthen attachment and address intergenerational legacies of the historical trauma of slavery, and acceptance or rejection of children based on skin color.

Her book, Therapeutic Cultural Routines to Build Family Relationships: Talk, Touch & Listen While Combing Hair © will be released in 2021. She serves on the National Zero to Three Advisory Board and as a Consultant with Safe Baby Court Teams on reducing racial disparities and implicit bias in child welfare systems. In 2020-2021, she is presenting a webinar series titled, Psychosocial Tools to Advance Race Equity for Families of Color in the Child Welfare Systems.
