

As a mixed methods researcher, the primary focus of Dr. Fleckman's work is the promotion of healthy families and communities through the prevention of child maltreatment and trauma. Dr. Fleckman's experience has been focused in the field of violence prevention for the past 10 years through research including the design, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of multi-level intervention strategies. Her current emphasis is on the prevention of childhood exposure to violence and trauma-informed care in early childcare and school settings.