

Mary L. Pulido, PhD, currently serves as the Executive Director of The New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, the first child protective agency in the world. The NYSPCC provides mental health, legal and educational services for children, families and professionals involved in the child protection arena. She developed the crisis debriefing protocol used to support NYC child protective service workers following critical incidents. She has held senior management positions at the Child Protection Center of Montefiore Medical Center, a certified Child Advocacy Center; The Children's Village, a long-term residential treatment facility for abused children; and at Covenant House/Under 21, a crisis shelter for homeless children.

She is also a Medical Reserve Corp 'first responder' to disaster trauma through the NYC Department of Health and Mental Hygiene and served as a member of the New York City Child Fatality Review Advisory Team from 2006 to 2015. She currently serves on the national Board of the American Professional Society on the Abuse of Children (APSAC) and is President of the New York State Professional Society on the Abuse of Children (APSAC-NY).

She has a Ph.D. in Social Welfare from the City University of New York, a Master's Degree in Social Work from Hunter College and a Master's Degree in Teaching from Sacred Heart University. Dr. Pulido holds the rank of Adjunct Assistant Professor at The Silberman School of Social Work at Hunter College. She has published in the areas of crisis debriefing, prevention of child sexual abuse, trauma recovery, supervised visitation and managing and preventing secondary traumatic stress. She is a blogger for Huffington Post and Medium on child protection issues.
