Janet Rosenzweig, PhD, MPA, earned certification as a sex-educator while completing a Master's degree in Health Education and was quickly recruited to work on one of the first child sexual abuse program in the country in 1978; her work in child sexual abuse lead to positions of increasing responsibility in child maltreatment in both public and non-profit settings including serving as the cabinet level director of human services for Mercer County, New Jersey, and Vice President for Research and Programs for Prevent Child Abuse America. Rosenzweig earned her PhD in social work from Rutgers and an MPA from Harvard's Kennedy School of Government. She is currently serving as the Executive Director of APSAC and a lecturer at The University of Pennsylvania. She is on the steering committee of the psychological maltreatment alliance and an active member of the research committee.