Kara Byrne, PhD is an Assistant Research Professor at the College of Social Work at the University of Utah. Her current research focuses on the development of a care process model to assess for and treat child traumatic stress. She is also the principal investigator of a grant examining the outcomes of legislation related to infant and mother welfare.