Abigail Williams-Butler, PhD, MA, MSW is an assistant professor at Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey. Her research interests focus on understanding the developmental trajectories of youth in child serving systems including the juvenile justice, child welfare, and mental health systems. She is also interested in social welfare interventions and policy as it relates to reducing racial disparities in child serving systems.